Naomi & Lois Harjo Scholarship

Scholarship Description

Joy Harjo is the primary supporter of the Naomi & Lois Harjo Scholarship. Her favorite Aunt Lois Harjo Ball and Grandmother Naomi Harjo Foster were daughters of Henry Marsey Harjo both were painters and graduated from Oklahoma City University with bachelor degrees in fine arts. Similarly, Foster and Ball were also interested in creative writing. Elsewhere, Harjo was raised with her aunt's and grandmother's art on the walls of her home. Her grandmother's painting of Osceola; a copy of a famous lithograph was given to Harjo by her family. Osceola was an uncle of Samuel Checotah who was one of Foster's and Ball's mother Katie Monahwee's grandfathers. Harjo also has possession of a painting by her aunt that is influenced by the Taos style of painting. Naomi Harjo Foster died relatively young of tuberculosis; Lois Harjo Ball continued painting prior to her death in Okmulgee, OK. Harjo's grandmother died when Harjo's father was young, but left a legacy of paintings behind; many of Foster's and Ball's paintings are in the collection of the Creek Council House Museum. Lois Harjo Ball was a great supporter of native arts and worked in collections at the Creek Council House Museum. This scholarship is in honor of Foster and Ball and goes to support a Muscogee (Creek) student studying in any of the fine arts including sculpture, painting, jewelry making, creative writing, music, or performance.
